Goals must be set for each of the four core competency areas.

- The candidate and supervisor should construct a set of specific goals within each core competency area, which will serve to structure the supervisory process.
- Information regarding goal setting may be found in the Board's document, Supervision of Candidates.
- Goals may be amended as appropriate (e.g., as goals are attained, change in work experience, or change in supervisor) by completing the appropriate sections of the Supervisor's Regular Report.
- Any amendments are subject to the Board's approval.

CORE COMPETENCIES

- Please refer to the Supervision of Candidates document for definitions of each of the four core competencies on which supervision must focus, as well as the specific knowledge and skill sets that are expected of a competent professional in each area. A fifth core competency on which applicants seeking entry to the profession of psychology are evaluated, research, is not normally a focus of training and evaluation during supervision; however, supervisors will address with candidates their abilities to apply research principles and findings in the four competencies of assessment and evaluation, intervention and consultation, interpersonal relationships, and ethics and standards.

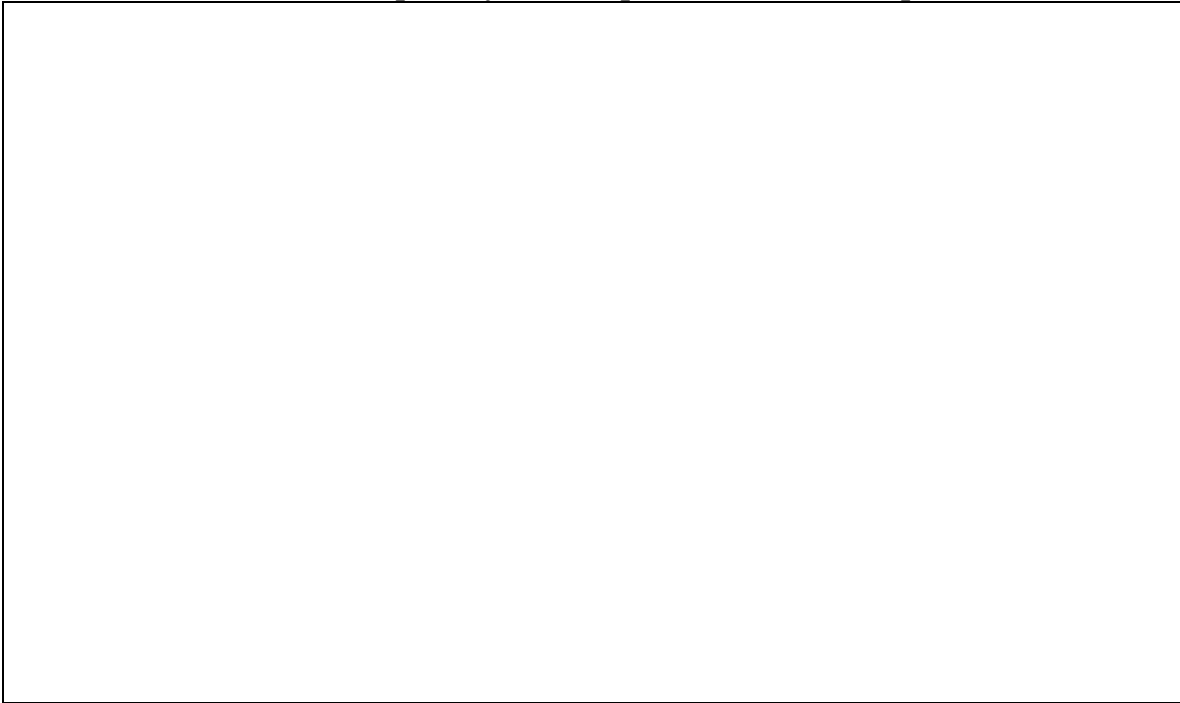

Please use the following sections to indicate your specific goals.
